Stirring Story Of Dutch Rescue Told As Struggle Goes On Over Jewish Children

All Dutch citizens who have children other than their own in their care must now declare them, according to a recent decree issued by the Government of the Netherlands.

Heavy penalties will be imposed in cases where guardians fail to disclose particulars of such children. There are at least 4,000 Jewish children in private Christian homes.

Most of the children involved are those whose parents were deported to the death camps.

A keen struggle is now going on regarding the future of the 4,000 children. Parties to the dispute are the Jewish Community itself, which is united on this matter, from the Orthodox Jews to the Communists, except for a small but influential group of extreme assimilationists; the foster-parents who want to keep the children for religious reasons or because of the strong attachment which has been formed, or because they are childless; and the Government, which takes the official view that the custody of the children should be decided according to the principle of the "benefit of the child."

As the alternative to the private home is an orphanage or a public institution, the latter argument has considerable force if the religious aspect is not stressed. Some Dutch religious circles claim that many of the parents adopted Christianity prior to their deportation, or had acquiesced in the baptism of their children as a protection, arguing that with the parents gone these children should be regarded as Christians.

The final decision rests with a special Government War Guardianship Committee consisting of [redacted] many is overlooking all the children.

How the children were rescued is revealed by Professor David Cohen, of Amsterdam, former President of the Jewish Central Information Office, who recalls that part of the rescue was managed in the Schouwburg theatre, says the London Jewish Chronicle. This was the collection point for Jews who had been caught by the Germans and were to be taken to the camps of Westerbork or Vught and thence to Poland. The supervision of the Jews was entrusted to the Jewish Council and to Dutch policemen; there was also a permanent S.S. guard. The staff of the Jewish Council co-operated with the Dutch police to mislead the S.S. guard in order to get as many Jews as possible out of the Schouwburg.

The Jews were then taken by car to some refuge, or fled to neighbouring houses where they received further help. Many were saved that way; sometimes the Jewish Council even managed to effect rescues from the train which was to take them to Westerbork, under the very noses of the S.S. guard on the platform.

The greater part of those saved were children. These were left by the Germans in the charge of nurses in the Jewish day-nursery opposite the Schouwburg. Adjoining the garden of the day-nursery was the garden of a school. The children were taken by the nurses to the school garden where they were received by members of the non-Jewish organization who smuggled the children out in potato sacks or parcels. The leaders of the organization, known as "Uncle Piet," "Piet," and other such names, would then pass the children on to various Christian families who took charge of them.

There was one big danger, that the children would be missed at the registration and the Germans might detect the deception. And so, when registration took place in the Schouwburg, dolls, or even small mattresses, were dressed in children's clothes and brought by the mothers and nurses, together with some real children. The Germans suspected that there was some fraud, but they never found out what it was.

The plans were laid by and carried out under the direction of the head of the Jewish staff in the Schouwburg, Walter Susskind, a very able man, who under the mask of "collaboration," thoroughly misled the Germans. For example, he removed and destroyed the personal files of those who had been saved—a very dangerous thing to do. Susskind was once imprisoned, but was soon set free again. Later he was sent to Theresienstadt, and then to Poland, where he died. One of his ablest assistants was Miss Hetty Brandel, who died in Bergen-Belsen.

Another example of the Dutch people's friendship for the Jews during the occupation, disclosed by Dr. Cohen, was the general strike in February, 1941, when the Jewish quarter of Amsterdam was [redacted] great concern. They threatened that unless it was called off, they would seize another 500 Jews.

Gruppenfuhrer Rauter himself came to Amsterdam and telephoned Hitler and Himmler about the trouble. The three men decided that the 500 Jews should not be arrested (a defeat for the Germans). The strike then came to an end.

That, as far as is known, was the only strike in Europe in support of the Jews. Later, when the Jews were obliged to wear the "Judenstern" (Jewish star), many Gentiles wore the badge so as to cause confusion and disorder. For this they were punished.

In their efforts to help Jews in hiding, often as many as ten to twenty were concealed in the same house, by aristocrats as well as by peasants, in the towns as well as in the country, in stables and cellars. In nearly every house there was a special refuge where Jews could be hidden. The most dangerous work was the distribution of food tickets and identity papers. There were large organizations the members of which became expert in the manufacture of false identity papers for Jews. Other members would cycle up and down the country to distribute the food tickets; they were frequently trapped on these tours (mostly through

N.Y. Jews To Meet Needs Outside Their Group

A master communal plan will be drawn up for use of the building and expansion fund of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, Maurice Wertheim, city-wide campaign chairman, said in a talk before a luncheon meeting of the women's division at the Hotel Commodore.

Nearly 600 leaders in the division attended the meeting, which started their drive in support of the Federation's $30,000,000 campaign. Mrs. Richard Percy Limburg and Mrs. Jerome I. Udell, co-chairmen, presided.

The building fund, which comprises $21,000,000 of the campaign goal, and is the first the Federation has sought in twenty-five years, is not based on blueprints of hospitals, community centers or social welfare agencies, Mr. Wertheim said.

"Instead we make this solemn pledge and promise: where and what we build shall be dictated by the total needs of the community," he declared. "Our guiding principal shall be communal planning, not institutional planning."

Aid of experts will be sought, he added, in considering the growth and shift of city populations, duplication of facilities, and new trends in medicine and social work. Resultant plans will thus be designed to contribute to total medical and welfare needs of the city.

The scientific genius of this generation can make tremendous progress in stamping out disease if it is provided with adequate financial support, he said. In addition, he cited the growing medical needs of the city, which require enlarged and modernized clinics, hospitals, dispensaries and laboratories. Seven hospitals that the Federation helps to support, pro-

[redacted] said that the Federation was conducting a war against poverty, fear and confusion in a world "convalescing from the insidious poison of fascism."

Describing the devastated cities she saw on an entertainment tour of soldiers' camps in Europe, she declared that mankind cannot survive another war, and that the future of the world will depend on the complete re-education of Germany and Japan.

While many Europeans will never live to re-establish their cities and homes, she said that Federation workers were "making a clearing in the midst of chaos."

Creator Of 'Bambi' Died In Exile

Felix Salten, author of "Bambi", the princely deer who appeared on the screen in Walt Disney's motion picture of the same name, died in Zurich, Switzerland, after a long illness. His age was 75.

Mr. Salten, who fled from Austria when Hitler invaded that country, wrote the original story of "Bambi" before leaving Vienna, and wrote the book for the movie in Switzerland. Among his works were "Perri", for children; "The Hound of Florence" and "Herr Wennsi Auf Rehberg."

In the New York Times of Sept. 8, 1929, G. E. R. Gayde wrote from Vienna: "Felix Salten is a remarkable example of Vienna's powers of assimilation. Born in Budapest of Jewish parents and learning Hungarian as his mother tongue, he has been absorbed, transformed and reborn of Vienna, as truly typical a Viennese as any one who came into the world within sight of the shadow of the spire of St. Stephen's Cathedral. Even when his pen travels beyond the narrow frontiers of Austria and depicts his personal land of desire, New Palestine, Salten pours always through Viennese spectacles and forms his judgments on Viennese principles."

After reading the English translation of "Bambi" John Chamberlain wrote: "Felix Salten takes you out of yourself. He has the gift of a tender, lucid style. His observation is next to marvellous, and he invests the fruits of this observation with pure poetry. His comprehension unites his deer, his screech-owls, his butterflies, grasshoppers and hares, far more exciting to read about than hundreds of human beings who crowd the pages of our novels."

Dachau Officials To Be Tried For Murder

From forty to fifty Germans, whose names are linked with the torture and murder of thousands of Jews, Communists and other political rebels against the Nazi regime at the Dachau concentration camp, will be tried by an American court in the largest war crimes trial yet held in the American zone.

The court will be established within the boundaries of the camp, according to Col. Leon Jaworski, of Houston, Tex., who is in charge of the war crimes trial board.

For the first time an American court will try Germans for atrocities practiced on other Germans, for thousands of those who died at Dachau were Germans Jews or Communists. Colonel Jaworski said that the doctors who had used the Jews and other prisoners as guinea pigs for experiments would be tried first and that others would follow.

At the start of the recent trial of seven Germans for having killed Poles and Russians at the Hadamar "murder factory" the military tribunal ruled against the introduction of evidence concerning the killing of thousands of Germans at the same institution. The somewhat unpredictable course of military justice has now veered and the Germans will be tried for having killed Germans at Dachau.

Colonel Jaworski estimates that at least 5,000 Jews were killed in the Landsberg section of Dachau alone and that between 1,000 and 3,000 others died or were driven mad under the torture of medical experimentation that sought to provide information on high-altitude flying for the German Air Force.

Jews who escaped from the camp will appear as witnesses for the prosecution, while among the [redacted] Dr. Claus [redacted] [redacted] charges of having used the prisoners as subjects, and Drs. Fritz Hintermeier and Paul Walter, who were in charge of subjecting prisoners to experiments

Arabs Warn; Firm Against Zionists

A warning of war in the Middle East if an attempt were made to set up an independent Jewish political state in Palestine was presented to Secretary of State James F. Byrnes in the memorandum that the representatives of four Arab States handed him on October 12. The legations of the four countries—Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, and Syria—made the memorandum public in Washington a week later.

"Regarding the peace of the Near East in general," the document said, "and of the Arab world in particular, one principle is certain: there obviously can be no peace in that region by sacrificing Arab interests for the sake of the Jews. A Zionist political state can be created in Palestine, but only with the help of external forces".

The memorandum declared that the "publicity" attending recent Zionist efforts to win political support for their goal of an independent Jewish Palestine nation had resulted in "a great misunderstanding of the real issue in Palestine on the part of American public opinion" and in "a deep feeling of concern throughout the Arab world."

"To transform a country that has been non-Jewish for thousands of years and Arab for 1,300 years into a Jewish state," the memorandum said, "is an act that obviously cannot be viewed with equanimity by the Arabs".

The four Arab States offered to cooperate in efforts to solve the Palestine problem but asserted that they wanted no solution at the "expense of the Arabs".

The Emir Abdullah Ibn Hussein, 64-year-old ruler of Trans-Jordan, asserted that Palestine belonged to the "whole Arab world" and that the present situation here, where domination is contested by both Jews and Arabs, was "very bad".

The bearded Emir, short and fair-skinned, said the situation in Palestine "will deteriorate if the Zionists insist upon their present aspirations."

"They—the Zionists—have been brought to this critical situation because Europe and America do

Support Of Zionist Cause In U.S. Includes Sharp Criticism Of Britain

Determined protests against allowing Arab States to be consulted in the affairs of Palestine were laid before Secretary of State James F. Byrnes in Washington by Dr. Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York, representing the American Zionist Emergency Council.

During a forty-minute conference, the Zionist leaders presented a detailed memorandum deploring that neither the Executive branch, nor the State Department in particular had "translated into action," what Dr. Silver and Dr. Wise outlined as an "unbroken chain of pro-Zionist acts, promises and pronouncements."

They stated that neither the letter of President Roosevelt to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, nor Mr. Byrne's recent statement "took any cognizance whatever" of the policy toward Palestine to which the American Government and people were both "committed." It was true, they added, that in neither instance had this policy been repudiated, but they said it had been omitted.

In a press conference, Dr. Silver said he and Dr. Wise had a "long and exploratory conversation" with Mr. Byrnes who "did seem to indicate that the matter (of Palestine) is closed."

At the same press conference, Dr. Silver accused King Ibn Saud of "infamous lies", and demanded that the American Government tell the Arab State that it did not propose to be "intimidated or blackmailed." The Arab States, he went on, were likely, without the aid of America, to "remain backward, impoverished and disease-ridden."

He asked why the British Labor party permitted a "shocking repu[diation]" of [redacted] spot, the immigration into Palestine was a "British colony," "are 6,000,000 Jewish dead not enough?" Must the rest of European Jews perish "in order to maintain Great Britain's imperial interest in the Far East?" he asked.

Sharp criticism of Britain's course in regard to Jewish refugees was voiced at the convention of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization, in Chicago, Ill. The delegates in a cable to Prime Minister Attlee said that "the remnants of European Jewry" were being treated "callously by a Government which has given solemn international pledges to defend their rights".

In their message to Mr. Attlee, the Hadassah delegates recalled his Labor party's "pronouncements in favor of maximal Jewish aspirations in Palestine, expressed in a resolution by the party before it came into power.

They charged that the British Labor Government "is moving farther away from its own clearly stated question" and that "our sense of betrayal is all the greater since it would appear that your Government is moving toward a disavowal of its pre-election commitments."

Mrs. Samuel Halprin, national political chairman of the organization, said the Jews of Palestine and the United States both want to see democracy anchored in the Middle East.

Mrs. Halprin suggested that the "30,000 Jews who fought for Britain in the Jewish brigade, should be permitted to come home, and, together with the British, protect Jewish rights and interests in Palestine."

Rabbi Arthur J. Lelyveld of New York, executive director of the Committee on Unity for Palestine, described anti-Zionists as "old-line British imperialists," Arabian pupets, "powerful American vested interests" and "a small but lavishly financed clique of American Jews," and American oil interests.

Before a crowd estimated by the police at 150,000, one of the greatest ever to mass in or near Madison Square Park, speakers in New York at a protest demonstration for a Jewish commonwealth in Palestine called on the British Labor Government to fulfill pledges of the Balfour Declaration and to abrogate the White Paper in 1939.

Declaring that the British have imposed a "blackout" on Palestine and are expelling journalists for reporting the presence there of armored tanks and troops, Dr. Israel Goldstein, president of the Zionist Organization of America, charged that a resistance movement [redacted] Britain's policy was violated.

"We refuse to recognize as 'illegal,'" he asserted, "any Jewish immigrant who enters Palestine without a certificate. Every Jew who enters the Jewish national home does so as of right. Illegal is the hand and the government that attempt to bar the Jew from the Jewish national home."

Constantine Poulos, correspondent of the Overseas News Agency, was ordered from Palestine without explanation. He had been there six days.

He was expelled under orders that originated with the British and were relayed through Lieut. Col. George F. Welch, head of the Public Relations Office in Cairo, Egypt. They were received simultaneously by the British Public Relations Office and the American consulate.

BROTHERS DISCOVER NEW MEASLES TREATMENT

Dr. Lyon Peter Strean, 173 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N.Y., formerly of Montreal, received United States Patent Number 2366725 for a new globulin solution for a treatment of measles. In the original publication made in collaboration with his brother, Dr. George J. Strean, of Montreal, some of the results of the initial experiments were listed. These doctors had observed that children under six months of age seldom get measles because of the blood fed to them prior to birth, thereby rendering them immune for that period of time. After six months, the antibody is dissipated and the child becomes susceptible. The Strean method is to save the afterbirth, draining blood from it. The critical factor is then extracted, the globulin fraction, and then concentrated and refined, treated with a globulin precipitant, such as anhydrous sodium sulphate, or ammonium sulphate, or alcohol. In a measles outbreak in Quebec City, involving over 200 children, of 154 not receiving the serum, 152 developed the disease; while of 50 receiving it, 48 either had the disease in a modified form, or not at all.

connected with high-altitude flying.

The Counter-Intelligence Corps has arrested Johann Eichelsdorfer, who was held responsible for having tortured and killed the Jews at Landsberg, it was learned.

Only the former chief surgeon at Dachau, Dr. Sigmund Rascher, is still outside American justice. It is reported, but not confirmed, that he had been executed after a quarrel with Himmler.

Colonel Jaworski said that the Jews had been "ruthlessly wiped out" by hanging and firing squad and gas chambers at Dachau. Frequently they were paraded into a gas chamber, told to strip for shower and then left to die when the gas was turned on.

Dachau is now being used by the Third Army as the scene of all war-crimes trials within its area and as the place of confinement for war criminals, the S.S. and important witnesses.

It's our obligation!

Today—in hospitals throughout the land, our Canadian men are paying their price for Victory.

Our obligation to these men is solemn. It's our duty to make certain that they have the best hospitalization, the best medical attention and the best care that can be provided.

Canada is providing this attention to our wounded men—and this costs money. You are not asked to give—only to loan your money—at a good rate of interest.

The men who now lie in hospital did not fail in doing their duty overseas—nor shall we at home.

A MAN YOU CAN DEPEND ON!

This man is typical of thousands who have served in the Tank Corps. He's been through a lot and he's coming home, keen to get back to civilian life.

Perhaps he was an armourer, a maintenance man, or a gunnery specialist, jobs requiring an exceptional combination of manual skill and technical knowledge, or he may have a diversified stores or orderly room background. Whatever his assignment, his training has been thorough, his experience wide. Travel has broadened his outlook. But above all, he has learned how to take responsibility and to think for himself in emergency.

Since "V-E" Day he has been taking special Vocational Training the better to fit him for his spot in the post-war sun.

Perhaps he is the very man you need!

"Strange Fruit"

Are ye not as the children of the Ethiopians unto Me,
O, children of Israel? saith the Lord.
Have not I brought up Israel out of the land of Egypt,
And the Philistines from Caphtor,
And Aram from Kir?—Amos IX:7
Have we not all one father?
Hath not one God created us?
Why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother,
Profaning the covenant of our fathers? — Malachi II:10

Montrealers had the privilege recently of witnessing the premier performance of a moving play, "Strange Fruit", by Lillian Smith. Believing with Maxwell Anderson that "the theatre is a religious institution devoted entirely to the exaltation of the spirit of man," I do not hesitate to comment from the pulpit on the dramatic performance and thus build a bridge between the theatre platform and the pulpit platform. Lillian Smith presents in her play an explosive problem which we must ultimately solve not only in the South of the United States but everywhere on the face of the globe where cruelty and humiliation degrade mankind. The real question dramatized in "Strange Fruit" has to do with "the oppressed". When and how shall the oppressed of the world be free? Wherever peoples are denied the full expression of their personalities and live under conditions of prejudice and intolerance these constitute the down-trodden.

There is no doubt that the thirteen million Negroes of the United States present a grave minority problem. Involuntarily they were brought to America and enslaved. A bloody civil war was fought for their emancipation under the inspiring guidance of the immortal Abraham Lincoln. The constitution of the United States protects the Negro as a citizen of this greatest democracy. Yet the paradox is that in this great free land the black man is so restricted as to work and opportunity in every department of life, and so discriminated against, that this constitutes the great shame of America.

To a large extent what is true of the United States regarding the Negro is equally so in our Dominion. How else explain the excitement that is so dominant in the baseball world at present because a Negro youth, Jack Robinson, had been made a member of the Montreal Royals? And who knows yet of the consequences to follow because the "unwritten law" in international baseball has been broken! What a sad commentary all this is on our American-Canadian civilization!

The Jewish people is another oppressed group. With the French revolution, Ghetto walls were shattered and individually the Jew was given political and civil rights in most civilized lands. But now, one hundred and fifty years following his emancipation, look what the hostile world has done to the Jew in the last decade! The horror of the Middle Ages with all forms of torture was brought down upon European Israel with the result that six millions of Jews perished. And even in democratic lands the Jew is placed under quotas if he seeks higher learning. If he is ambitious he is charged with being aggressive. And in the world of business he is actually feared. For most non-Jews the Jew seems to be a myth more than a reality. Somehow he is not treated as a fellow human being, for the most part. Who can deny that Jews belong to the oppressed of the earth? In India there are the untouchables. On the European continent there are to this day all sorts of oppressed minorities struggling for freedom.

The worker of society is still oppressed. Does the laboring man get what he ought to get under our economic system, where exploitation rules? No wonder that labour now is crying out for the opportunity to share in the nations' wealth. When will the co-operative society emerge and thus liberate the workers of the world?

All these oppressed groups will, indeed, win their freedom when they themselves sacrifice and if need be fight for their own emancipation. Cringing will not do! And the decent of society must help the oppressed in the fight for their emancipation. Freedom for all is the responsibility of all decent men and women. Hence the great need for us to develop the cosmic consciousness which causes us to see the universe as everybody's world! It must be thus one world for all peoples or no world!

But this world democracy must be organized and hinges for its endurance upon our inward growth of spirit. The test of a civilized being is his or her capacity for sympathy, pity and compassion toward the weak of society. This is the basis of the command: "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." Here is where religion, education and democracy must play the part of disciplining us in brotherhood.

The most tragic, horrible war in history has just been brought to an end. From it we must have learned that in God's world garden there is no strange fruit but rather a variety of fruit. It is this variety in nature which gives beauty to this world. God meant it thus.

We predict that Lillian Smith's play will have much success when it reaches Broadway. It preaches a great message and summons all of us to dedicate ourselves to combat injustice and brotherlessness and to resolve to help build the better society of fraternity and equality.

"They are slaves, who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak;
They are slaves, who will not choose
Hatred, scoffing and abuse,
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth they needs must think
They are slaves, who dare not be
In the right with two or three."

"Sometimes when people compare me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Early reports of anti-Semitic excesses in Poland during the summer were fragmentary, more like rumors. News about this condition did not come through expected sources but in round-about ways. For example, two Jews reached Bremen from Poland and told about pogroms raging there. One was Bernard Senamjoch, of Krakow, and the other was Samual Sultan, of Charneca, and they told their story to an American Jewish chaplain. This chaplain told some Jewish news correspondent that he had received similar reports from other sources. Sultan said that the attacks on Jews were organized by the A.K. Group, Army Krjova, which a later authenticated report said was connected with a Polish officers' camp in Bavaria, hostile to democratic forces. This group was using the old, accustomed ways of misusing the Jews, even to the ritual murder falsehood. They had non-Jewish children killed and had them hidden near Jewish homes, and then discovered them as a pretext for a massacre. The latest Jewish reports are that Jews are still being murdered by organized bands.

At first this column did not believe there was very much to the earliest, stray reports of new anti-Semitic violence in Poland. This feeling seems to have been shared by such a correspondent as Carl Levin, of the New York Herald Tribune, who was seeking confirmation. At first the only confirmation was the similarity of reports obtained from Jews who started to stream back from Poland to slip into the protective American zone in Germany. Then the first confirmation from a non-Jewish source came when a Pole was arrested in a transient displaced persons' camp in Munich after he had boasted about killing three Jews in a pogrom at Radom in Poland. He admitted his part in it and said he had acted on orders from the Army Krjova and was on his way from Poland to the camp in Bavaria where Polish Army officers loyal to the former London Polish Government are awaiting repatriation.

A Jewish arrival at the camp at Zeilsheim, Germany, who had gone back to Poland and then returned to the American zone said that Jews had been advised to leave for their own safety by Polish officials. In some instances Soviet officials had ordered Jews into large cities where it was easier to protect them. At Krakow, in August, fifty Jews were killed and fifty were injured when a gang of boys started to stone a synagogue and a tenement house one Sabbath day. It would have been much worse except for the fact that Russian and Polish troops threw a cordon around the site to save it not only from civilians but from the Polish police who had joined the pogrom. Unless this occasion was an exception, the Army Krjova had posted an announcement at the scene warning the Jews to leave before a certain date.

The situation is so bad that refugees take to the road and make for the American zone even on foot if that is the only way to get there. They arrive bedraggled and fearful of rebuff or worse. In order to get a better reception they claim to have been hidden in Germany, afraid to say that they have returned from the place where they are expected by the authorities to remain. It is from such people, in terror of their lives, that the true state of affairs has become known through their reports to army men and their affidavits.

One such document contained the testimony of a man who had been commissioned by others, who could not come back, to say that anti-Semitism is so general in Poland that it should have the attention of the world. A commentary on this tragedy is the fact that Jews are afraid to live in small groups in rural areas and press back into familiar ghettoes, the tens of thousands who once were millions. The lucky ones are not those who are forced to call themselves at home and accept their situation but those who are in the displaced persons' camps which under Eisenhower's orders are improving as shelters of comfort, even though they vary.

Ugly incidents have been reported in connection with preventing the attempt of Jews who escape from Poland from remaining in the American zone, but this column does not know as yet just how authoritative they are. At any rate, General Eisenhower recently cabled to the Agudas Israel of America that Polish Jews in the American-held part of Germany are not being forced to return to Poland against their will.

Wincenty Rzymowski, Foreign Minister of Poland, who was in New York, told three representatives of the American Jewish Committee there that the anti-Semitic riots in Poland were the work of anti-democratic elements who are in opposition to the present Polish regime. He said that the true attitude of the Polish Government toward Jews is indicated by the recent adoption of a law against anti-Semitic agitation and by the fact that, for the first time, Jews hold ministerial posts in the Polish Cabinet. The Government intends to prosecute fifty or sixty participants in the Krakow riots. It has an agreement with the Soviet Government to return all Polish citizens, Jews and non-Jews, who now reside in the Soviet Union as a result of the Curzon boundary line. But, he said, although Poland is in dire need of manpower, it will put no obstacle in the way of Jews leaving who can establish themselves elsewhere.

These are honest intentions voiced by a man who means for the best. However, it is a question how much can be expected from them considering the fact that Rzymowski had to admit that his government is still not strong enough to maintain order and protect its citizenry. Representatives of the American Jewish Committee are going into Poland with promise of full cooperation in their work of mitigating the plight of the Jews with aid and assistance. Here's hoping they won't get bumped off while they are making observations in a country whose citizenry can teach the whole world all the ins and outs of fostered anti-Semitism, and offer post-graduate courses.

Gladwin Hill, writing from Warsaw, said in the New York Times of Saturday, October 27: "Educated Gentiles seriously declare that the one good thing the Germans did was to resolve Poland's 'Jewish problem', and blandly retail ghastly jokes about Jews assembled for deportation." This goes to show how well-indoctrinated a people can become when those who wish it keep at it long enough. f.f.c.

STIRRING STORY

treachery) and sent to concentration camps or shot. Many Dutch citizens were killed or sent to concentration camps for hiding Jews. But the fate of these did not deter others from continuing the work.

In Holland to-day, there are barely 25,000 Jews, and these include 5,000 so-called "strangers" from Central and Eastern Europe. (The pre-war Jewish population of Holland was 180,000). Nearly 80 per cent of the Jews are in receipt of government support.

Of the 20,000 Dutch Jews who have reappeared, about half have returned from concentration camps. The remainder "dived under", the Dutch phrase for going underground.

The country is still under emergency regulations. Theoretically, all property must be restored to the rightful owners, but in practice, the returning refugees have yet to benefit from this regulation.

There are 9,000 Jews in Amsterdam, but the whole of the city's ghetto is occupied by Christians. Not a single Jew lives there. The only Synagogue still standing is that of the Portuguese community.

Zionist work is being revived. The Jewish papers, Le-Ezrath Ha-Am, Nieuws Israelitisch Weekblad, now the official organ of the Dutch Zionist Federation, and Joodsche Wachter, have begun to appear again, as has another Zionist paper, Tikvath Israel, organ of the Zionist youth organization. On July 29, the Zionist youth movement held its first public meeting, which was attended by 150 youths.

Now there are 2,000 Dutch Zionists, at least half of whom want to go immediately to Palestine. In addition, 2,000 of the so-called "strangers" also want to emigrate to Palestine. There are five or six Hachsharah centres in the country.

But liberation has not meant freedom for the Jews in Holland. Jew-baiting is now rampant. The seriousness of the position may be judged by some extracts from a recent article, entitled "Anti-Semitism," in the Amsterdam Socialist daily Het Vrye Volk.

"Before the war anti-Semitism was in this country little more than a faint rumour," the article state. "The Jewish sector was merged in the national life, without hate. Which Dutchman did not count Jews amongst his best friends? How large was the number of mixed marriages? And see how our people, at the time of the hostile German terror, stood with the persecuted Jews! . . . And yet the poison of Jew-hatred has infected our national life. The Dutch Jews were deported, tortured, and murdered in tens of thousands. Those who have survived are few in numbers. But anti-Semitism has grown tremendously, and is directed against the small, hard-hit, and sorrow-laden remnant of that body of Dutchmen. Readers of newspapers will find, on all sides, evidence of anti-Semitism both open and concealed."

Another Dutch paper, Parsat, attributes the increase in anti-Semitism, in the first instance, to the Dutch people themselves. "Five years of Nazi rule have corrupted our people," the paper says. "They have become coarse and cruel. Nazi influence has put the moral brake out of order and awakened the slumbering instincts of domination and destruction. This is the cause of the heartless behaviour that many still show towards the sorely afflicted Jews."

Foremost among these Jews are 8,000 refugees from Germany. Their claim to be considered "Stateless" on the strength of the German decree of November 25, 1941, is not recognized by the Dutch authorities.

A circular issued by the Military Authorities in The Hague in July distinguishes between those German Jews and Stateless persons who were resident in Holland before May 10, 1940, and went underground, and those resident before May 10, 1940, who were deported. Only the first category is to be exempt from the designation of Enemy Aliens, because "their past record justifies the assumption that they have indeed been anti-German".

The editor of Vry Nederland concludes, however, that though the Nazi poison had bitten deeper than was at first suspected, nevertheless the body of the nation appeared healthy enough to conquer the disease.

BAMBI CREATOR

Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, Mr. Salten wrote the German translation of "Abie's Irish Rose", which was produced in Vienna in 1927. Reviewers found that "very little humor was lost" in the process. Max Reinhardt produced the show, the season's biggest hit in the Austrian capital.

Other Salten works besides those noted above are "Samson and Delilah," "Florian, the Emperor's Stallion," (which New York saw as a movie in 1940); "Bambi's Children", "Good Comrades", "Renni, the Rescuer", "City Jungle", "Fifteen Rabbits" and "The Hound of Florence".

In 1902 he married Ottilie Metzl.

SUPPORT OF

He was told of the orders at 11 A.M., and four hours later a car called to take him to the airfield for a flight to Cairo.

Mr. Poulos wrote but one story in which he described the local scene with its tenseness. He also referred to the increasing number of British troops in the area. A resident of Lynn, Mass., Mr. Poulos came to the Middle East after reporting on conditions in Greece.

Victor M. Bienstock, foreign service chief of the Overseas News Agency, said in New York:

"Although censorship on outgoing correspondence was supposed to have been abolished in Palestine on October 1, Mr. Poulos succeeded in having only one message cleared for transmission. This dispatch on October 19 compared the situation in Palestine today with the situation in Greece a year ago, on the eve of the outbreak of disorders in that country, and described some of the measures the British authorities were taking in Palestine.

"The expulsion of this American correspondent from Palestine can be taken as confirmation that the British colonial authorities are determined to control the flow of information from the Holy Land in the present critical situation and to insure that only the official version of impending events is known to the world."

Unrestricted Jewish immigration into Palestine was asked in a resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the national board of the National Council of Jewish Women, held for seven days at Essex House. The board declared that it was "horrified by the tragic plight of our fellow Jews in Europe and moved by their need to enter Palestine."

Belief that the British Government should modify its Near East immigration laws and open Palestine to Jewish refugees was voiced in Washington by members of an unofficial Congressional group, who said they will go to London within two or three weeks to press the issue with Prime Minister Attlee.

Headed by Senator Charles W. Tobey, Republican, of New Hampshire, the group also urged that Congress "Demand . . . (the) executive department to take steps for interim international action."

In still another quarter, Representative Victor Wickersham, Democrat, of Oklahoma, reported he has done an "about face" on increasing Jewish immigrant quotas for Palestine since a recent visit to the Near East.

"I was [illegible] Congress [illegible] opposed the position favoring the establishment of a home nation in Palestine for Jews," he said, "but after seeing conditions in Europe and the Near East, I've changed my mind. I now believe it would not be in the interest of the Jews themselves."

Representative Wickersham explained that the 100,000 Jewish survivors from German concentration camps are being cared for "adequately" under the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and that to move them to Palestine would place them in "immediate jeopardy of Arab persecution." He said there are 70,000,000 Arabs in the Near East and that "all are aware of the Palestine problem," adding, "to move a large number of Jewish refugees there now would renew ancient hostilities between the Arabs and the Jews in that area."

Representative Wickersham also stressed that the Near East oil reserves, amounting to more than 50,000,000,000 barrels, must be safeguarded from any sort of native revolt. "In this the United States has a direct interest, since American companies are involved in most of the well operations in Saudi Arabia and Iran," he said.

ARABS WARN

not wish to accommodate them," said the Emir, whose sparsely peopled land lies along Palestine's eastern frontier.

"Palestine, however, belongs not only to its Arab citizens, but to the whole Arab world."

"I have written to both the late and the present Presidents of the United States about all I know regarding Palestine, in order to prevent calamities which will be inevitable if the situation further deteriorates, and I have received from both replies to the effect that no final decision will be taken before the Arabs have been consulted," he continued.

The Emir also declared that the people of Syria desired complete unity and said it had been distorted by "foreign interests". He said that not a single Arab would choose to maintain the present subdivisions of Syria "and all would be happy to see every inch of it free of foreign rule."

He said he still adhered to the aims of the great Arab revolution" and desired to obtain complete sovereignty and cancellation of the British mandate over the territory.

Pope Pius XII gave an audience to Dr. A. Leon Kubowitzki, general secretary of the World Jewish Congress.
